CLAY HEADS WORKSHOP

This is an opportunity for TAP members to engage in some creative practice and personal development using the most ancient of making materials - CLAY.

Explore the magic of clay and experience the profound affecting nature of bringing a being into existence through your own hands. Many exciting questions emerge – Who is this? Where did this being come from? What do I make of its presence? What does it mean to me/others?

In this two hour workshop people will be given the necessary tuition to build a clay figure from the chest up whilst being asked to engage in thought and feeling about a particular part of themselves or another person which will emerge more fully through the clay head as the workshop proceeds.

Previous clay head workshops in different context show that there is something deeply moving and resonant about making a 'being' out of clay and that the experience of doing it alongside others deepens the experience as there will be time whilst working and when completed to engage in shared experience.

Absolutely no experience necessary, it is a very relaxed workshop with emphasis on engagement with the process, each other and discussion about ideas of the 'created self'. Just bring yourself and an open mind.
